

first attempt about relationship you: yeah this relationship thing is fucked one - we were meant to roam, but then got tamed me: (i was unsettled - my answer as good as nothing) yeah, thats true, but somehow i am looking for a relationship that let me feel home, let be me, respect for my interest as well as for the other, communication, time for each other.

you: my only gripe is - why linger where you not appreciated me: because we started our story. i didnt want give up immediately... i lingered to understand you: all great stories start with romance and end with a tragedy me: please stop philosophic views - its not tragic - i hate u you: coz i am the one to tell you that life is hard enough when you belong here me: i know how difficult life is there. u got the whole story why i lingered you: no you are misunderstanding me - when you belong to this life - the matter you are talking about may have to do with being from here and being from there - but there is another element to it the human element i am talking of me: exactly that is what i mean. human means to me understanding the other deeply. not looking for your own benefit only.

you: how do you attach your life to somebody else is the shit I don't understand - oh well it is love